WILLIAMSTOWN.

We have been looking over some old copies of "The Watchman," printed in Montpelier in 1809. The paper was at that time a four-page paper, with four columns on a page, the size of the pages having been some 11 by 17 inches. The copy of May 28, 1809, is numbered as 122 of volume 3. The only notice relating to Williamstown in that issue is that Merchants Barna Biglow and Abner Price, Jr., have dissolved partnership, and that Mr. Price will continue the business. We suspect that Mr. Price may have been a brother of the late Darius Price, Esq., so long one of the most prominent citizens of the town later. We find the account of just one murder in the paper, which is headed, "Most Horrid Murder," of an Irish merchant in North Carolina, and, good to say, no colored person was suspected of having committed it. A column and a quarter of the issue of May 28 is taken by the postmaster general of the United States, Gideon Granger, calling for proposals for carrying mails in Vermont. One of these is for "carrying the mail from Windsor to Burlington, via Williamstown, Montpelier and Waterbury, etc., once a week." "Scissoring" play an important part in the make-up of this particular number. One column is taken up with "A Reliance of the Awful Sin of Swearing," "Thoughts on Pride and Vanity," and "On the Female Sex," and "On the Female Sex." In Williamstown Price Current in Boston, we find loaf and lump sugar, 15 to 18 cents per pound; butter, 16 to 18; flour, 87 to 87.50 a barrel; and spirits, rum, gin, brandy, galore, from 50 cents a gallon to $1.60. A study of some of these old papers is a feast.

Death of Carl Edminster After Many Weeks of Suffering.

The death of Carl Edminster occurred at the home of his mother, Mrs. Martha Williams, on Dudley street, Sunday night after many weeks of suffering with rheumatic fever. For many years he has been afflicted with frequent attacks of this disease, when he would be confined to the house for weeks; but afterwards would improve and be able to take up his work. This winter he has been very ill but up to within a few weeks his recovery was expected. However, the disease took an unfavorable turn in the last few days and all efforts to relieve him were of no avail. The deceased was for many years the engineer at the Salsbury Brothers' furniture manufactory, where he did efficient and faithful work. He was also a member of the L. O. O. F., and this organization was present at his funeral on Wednesday and conducted the burial service. Mr. Edminster had no family, he never having been married; but he is survived by his mother, with whom he resided, and several half sisters and brothers. The deceased was a young man of promise, having been endowed with more than average ability, and his early death will be a sorrow to many in the community besides his relatives.
